

Committee Name: Fourth Committee of the United Nations General Assembly (SPECPOL)

Country: Chad

Agenda: The Somalia Conflict: Implications for peacemaking and peacekeeping efforts

Delegate: Ebrar Nur Çetin

The Human Rights Advisor Unit was established in 2011 within the UN Country Team in Chad. In September 2016, the Government Chad and OHCHR agreed to establish a Country Office in Chad. The Chad Country Office, which is functional since 2018, advises and assists the Chadian Government in the development and implementation of human rights and gender policies, strategies, programs and measures to promote and protect human rights. Therefore the most important right for human beings is right to live. The right to live freely is not possible while being under terrorists. In 2020, Chad experienced persistent terrorist attacks against military and civilian targets in the Lake Chad region. In March, suspected Boko Haram (BH) militants killed 98 Chadian soldiers near Boma in the Lake Chad region, the deadliest single attack in Chad's history. In April the Chadian government's "Wrath of Boma" military offensive, which stretched across Niger's and Nigeria's borders, repulsed BH fighters but failed to establish security in areas bordering Lake Chad. BH continued employing suicide bombers and IEDs, including the first documented use of a maritime IED in Chad. BH continued to be the most active terrorist organization in Chad, and ISIS-West Africa also maintained a presence. The Chadian government remained a reliable partner of U.S. and other CT missions even as the COVID-19 pandemic depressed government revenues. Security forces and basic government services remained underfunded, which limited the Chadian government's effectiveness, but Chadian armed forces led missions within the region to maintain security in the Sahel. Chad maintained a strong commitment to fight terrorists by deploying soldiers to Mali to support MINUSMA, bolstering the Lake Chad Region's MNJTF, and committing forces to the G-5 Sahel Joint Force. Chad continued to host the French Operation Barkhane, France's CT mission for the Sahel. The United States remained the largest direct supporter of Chadian security forces.

In short, Chad , which is terror nest and still has a long way to go regarding peace, has nevertheless had gotten a place to live for Chadian people. In an other hand we believe we achieved some things by wanting help from European and United States. Not only the Chadian government also sought security support from near-peer competitors.

For the sake of ending the civil war in Somalia, we need help to defeat terrorists like Al-Shabaab. Countries that owns mighty weapons like United States will be able to defeat terrorists we also believe with the support of near-peer competitors Somalia will be cleaned from terrorists. We are in favor of choosing a country as an intermediary for Somalia`s peace and we will do our best in this regard. We want every country to give their best to come up with solutions and services.
