1. Introduction

Dear Chairs, Delegates,

As British Major General John Jeremy Moore, I present this "Position Paper" to you regarding our strategic objectives, mindset, and position during the Falkland War. This document will focus on Britain's role in the 1982 Falkland War and shed light on the goals of the government at that time and the objectives of the ground forces under my leadership.

2. Strategic Objectives and Priorities

Upon the occupation of the Falkland Islands, the fundamental strategic objective of the British government was to preserve territorial integrity and liberate the islands from Argentine occupation. In this context, military intervention was inevitable, and ground operations were among our top strategic priorities. Regaining control of the Falkland Islands, ensuring security in the region, and preserving Britain's global reputation were paramount objectives.

3. Diplomatic Efforts and International Support

During the Falkland War, the British government pursued diplomatic efforts intensively. Additionally, the support received from the international community played a critical role in achieving our strategic objectives. Our diplomatic efforts aimed to encourage a peaceful resolution when the occupation of the islands came to an end.

4. Role and Strategy of Ground Forces

The role of our ground forces was to advance decisively on the Falkland Islands and effectively neutralize enemy forces. I, Major General John Jeremy Moore, was responsible for planning and managing ground operations. Our strategy was to make determined progress in reclaiming the islands and removing the enemy from them.
