Population: Afghanistan is a landlocked country located in Central Asia, South Asia, and is a part of the Greater Middle East; It has a population of around 30 million inhabiting an area of approximately 652,860 km, making it the 42nd most populous and 41st largest nation in the world.

Topic: With 244 million children and young people currently affected by conflict, health or climate-related disasters, political or economic crises and associated forced displacement, including refugee crises, there is an urgent need to intervene and end this vicious cycle. Crises change education systems and significantly alter the long-term investments required to ensure their resilience to disruptions.

Resolution: Afghanistan's participation in UNESCO projects could be an important step to increase intercultural dialogue and understanding. Such training programs can strengthen communication among diverse communities in Afghanistan and provide opportunities for cooperation in cultural heritage preservation and sustainable development. These programs can help people better understand, respect, and work together with each other and their own cultures.
