

Country: South Africa

Committee: United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF)

Topic: To protect children from bullying and violence.

As South African delegates we attend at UNICEF. In this committee we argue about bullying and violence towards children. We think that all children should live safe and without violence. As the South African delegates, we believe this is a sensitive issue and deserves attention.

South African child rights agreement was approved on 1995. Moreover, children are protected with a 1998 domestic violence law. Children's privacy and protection rights are protected by a 2005 child law that replaced the 1983 child care law. UN's last and 9th meeting about violence towards children was on 20 July 2005 in Africa Johannesburg. At this meeting, the necessary steps were initiated to protect children from violence and bullying.

As South African delegates we know that violence towards children and bullying is a huge problem and we are continuing our work to prevent it. We hope all children in South Africa and around the world grow up safe and on equal footing.

REFERENCES:

Bianet.org (web)

Humanium.org