The Russian Federation believes sustainable development is the most significant topic in our lives. All countries want to achieve their goals in the fastest and efficient way. In this situation not all countries are in the same position. But this is the shared responsibility and that's why we should do something together.

We have lots of problems that need to be solved, these are: Gender equality, lack of water, famine, climate change and more... And if we don't do something or don't take precautions we never can talk about sustainable development. We have some solution ideas like the other countries and we want to explain these ideas in this position paper.

First of all, what is the position of the Russian Federation regarding the subject of discussion? The Russian Federation endorses in principle the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Indeed, in 2015 Russia adopted the UN's 2030 Sustainable Development Goals, just like most of the United Nations member states. And when we review these 17 SDGs we can find a few suggested solutions. These are; Voluntary National Reviews to be submitted to the UN, significantly reduce the air pollution with Paris Agreement, create a high-quality education system for our students and international students, wage regulations in the context of gender equality and etc. In brief, our policy is based on the principle of sovereignty, the protection of national priorities, and international cooperation.

In conclusion, the Russian Federation believes that sustainable and inclusive solutions can only be achieved through dialogue and collective action. The delegation remains open to cooperation with all member states to ensure long-term progress on this issue.
