

Committee: World Food Programme (WFP)

Country: Russia

Agenda Item: Ensuring Food Security for Children in Emergencies

Name: Taha Ebrahimi

The World Food Programme (WFP) is a UN group that helps people during emergencies. When there are wars or floods, children cannot eat properly. WFP gives them food like biscuits, oil, or school meals. This saves lives. Russia is a big country in Europe and Asia. It has many natural resources and a strong army. Russia helps other countries and works with the United Nations. We care about helping people during crises, especially children.

This topic is important for Russia. We think every child must eat, even during war or disaster. In 2022, Russia gave 1 million dollars to WFP to help children in Tajikistan with food and wheat flour. We also helped build school kitchens. Russia works with WFP and sends food to other countries. School meals help children go to school and stay healthy.

Russia wants to support school meal programs. We think it is good to send ready food and help schools make meals. Countries should give more money to WFP. We will keep working with WFP and share food with people in need. Together, we can protect all children from hunger in emergencies.
