India values the sustainable development and had already put goals to achieve this subject

The goals are; no Poverty, zero hunger, good health&well-being and quality education

India's Point Of View About SGD13&SDG8;

India has been constantly working on balancing rapid economic growth with the need to protect its natural resources. India has rolled out numerous schemes and policies to promote renewable energy, sustainable agriculture, and green infrastructure. There is a constant effort to reduce poverty and improve living standards to ensure that future generations inherit a healthy and thriving environment.

Here is a list of some schemes that have created a massive impact on India's effort to meet its sustainable goals by 2030

1-New Pension Scheme

2-Water Supply Scheme

3- Start-up India Scheme

4-Employee Pension Scheme

Those are just a few. As seen India is currently doing major changes towards meeting its SDG goals by 2030

India's point of view about SDG1;

India's commitment to ending poverty in all its forms is reflected through targeted economic reforms, financial inclusion programs, and rural employment schemes.

Programs such as;

- Mahatma Gandhi National Rural Employment Guarantee Act (MGNREGA) have provided over 2 billion person-days of employment annually, significantly enhancing rural infrastructure and purchasing power. MGNREGA, has not only reduced poverty but also promoted gender equality by ensuring significant female participation.

To have sustainable development this kind of actions should be done, india also looks forward to do international cooperation with other countries.
