

Country: Republic of South Africa

Committee: UN-Habitat (United Nations Human Settlements Programme)

Agenda Item: UN-Habitat of Republic of South Africa

The Republic of South Africa is located at the south of the African continent and is one of the most urbanized countries in Africa. The most of the population live in cities, such as Johannesburg and Cape Town. However, South Africa continues to face serious humanity problems, including informal settlements and limited access to basic services. These problems are mostly linked to rapid urbanization.

The urban problems in South Africa are mostly connected to social and economic inequalities. By the time, the government improved living conditions and reduced these inequalities. South Africa works closely with the United Nations and actively supports UN-Habitat programs. The country also supports the Sustainable Development Goals and aims to improve housing conditions and urban planning.

South Africa supports the goals of UN-Habitat. The country believes that all people should have access to safe and affordable housing and also applies policies that improve basic services such as clean water, sanitation, and electricity. The delegation believes that sustainable cities are essential for social equality and long-term development.
