-Tackling Transnational Human Trafficking Counterparts in the Dark Web

Honorable chair, esteemed delegates;
I'm a delegate of the Russian federation. All our flags' colors have meaning, the white represents nobility and sincerity, the red represents kindness, love, and courage, the blue represents faith, honesty, and impeccability. I work as a criminal intelligence analyst. We identify the patterns of criminal behavior by checking every data and using tools such as risk assessments and stopping crime by predicting it in the past.

Like Russia, we haven't gotten a window of opportunity to put up more measures of safety against human trafficking but we will do it as soon as possible. We also acknowledge the fact that human trafficking will never end but, we can lower it by a lot. One of the biggest if not the biggest platform for human trafficking is the dark web. The dark web can only be accessed by Tor Browser(Onion Browser) or I2P (invisible internet project).In tor browser rather than directly connecting the Tor browser takes you through virtual tunnels which makes both of the parties invisible. Cobwebs developed a dark web monitoring software developed with methodologies that meet the requirements of all the law enforcement agencies around the whole world it also lets authorities identify human trafficking on the dark web and it even let lets age with traffickers with full anonymity providing evidence if this person was to go on trial.
