Rules Of The Committee

FBI: Can only win if all trucks are secured or the drug has been destroyed or all the cartel leaders gets neutralized

Pablo Escobar and his allies: They win if they have the most trucks under their control at the end of the conference

Guadalajara Cartel: They win if they have the most trucks under their control at the end of the conference or if they hand over Pablo Escobar to the police alive.

Santa Ana Cartel: They win if they have the most trucks under their control at the end of the conference.

Suggestions for delegates: Since the events are carried out in multiple countries to get the advantage people must understand the geography very well as well as the countries culture and rules. we expect delegates to plan their routes by using landmarks as reference points. So it is important that delegates know what these landmarks are. The policemen should understand the international policies of other countries; any directives that break other countries' rules either won't get accepted or will have negative feedback. Fbi should also respect the UN policies although some of the book's actions might be overlooked, continued usage of illegal actions can have major consequences of the fbi. Cartels as in real life should try to make it look legal and cover up their tracks if they are not careful they will be punished. In the beginning of the committee they will be given time to make a route for the trucks and plan out their arrival while the fbi tries to predict what they are going to do. We expect delegates to carefully plan their routes using landmarks from the countries that they are going to. Starting from Spain then transporting via ship to Colombia then to Mexico and then to the American border is necessary. However they have the freedom to plan their escort freely according to the rules given.

Directive Writing Guide:

Directives are short working papers focusing on specific topics. They work as guidelines for the committee and determine how the events will escalate. They can, for example, be used to declare that faction X will move Y amount of troops from location A to B. They may also be used for things like requesting a meeting with someone from another cabinet. Directives do not have to be long extremely detailed however, they should be clear and answer questions such as: What? Who? When? Where? From where to where? With what? and For what? Other related questions to be kept in mind are:

- ❖ Who are you writing to?
- ❖ What do you want to accomplish?
- ❖ When do you want it accomplished?
- ❖ Where do you want it to happen (if applicable)?
- ❖ Why do you want to do this?
- ❖ How do you intend to accomplish it?

Directives should also be written according to the time the event takes place in. On top of all directives it must be specified what type of directive it is. These are the different types of directives, which delegates will be allowed to use.

Directive Types

1. Joint Directive:

These directives are written by a minimum of 2 delegates and they have to specify the points mentioned above. These directives are used if a minimum of two characters of different positions have to come together in order to be able to pass an action. For example, members of the cabinet, or the entire cabinet together may write a joint directive to announce the change in their internal regulations, or can also write a committee directive to declare war on the other faction/cabinet.

2. Directives written by the entire committee are normally called “Committee Directives”:

These directives are usually very long and comprehensive. These directives are written by the whole committee.

3. Press Release:

Having a different function than directives, press releases are written if the committee or cabinet has something to announce to the public. They are usually in the form of a newspaper and the structure is clear, direct and informative.

Although they are loyal to Jack Garcia when overworked and bribed they can easily betray their superiors.

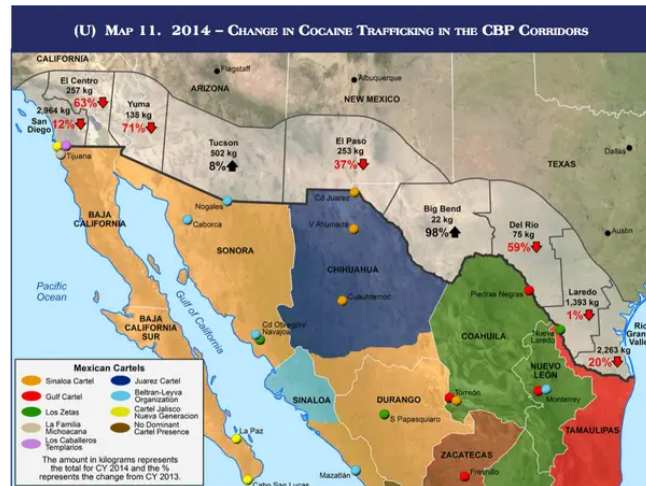

EXPLANATION OF AGENDA ITEMS

Pablo Escobar and his allies hit the jackpot when they got their hands on 9 trucks filled up with drugs, in total carrying 9 tons of cocaine. Only problem is that they have to smuggle them from Spain to Medellin then past the United States border. Escobar assembled his best man to take care of this job. He built his team like a jigsaw puzzle. There was one thing on his mind still bothering him. He usually worked with his own man but this big of a job called for other cartels such as Guadalajara Cartel and the Santa Ana Cartel to join. This made him anxious. He knew the others were greedy and could steal from him. Only then he found out that the government got a tip and knew they were trying to make the biggest drug trade off all time so they assembled a team of their own. This meant there were 2 parties he had to worry about even though he called one of them allies.

The Colombian Cartels

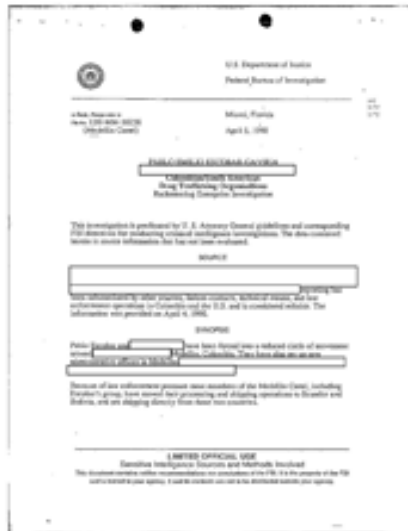

Since the 1970's, Colombia has been home to some of the most violent and sophisticated drug trafficking organizations in the world. What started as a small cocaine smuggling business has, in the last thirty years, blossomed into an enormous multinational cocaine empire. Traffickers today have enough capital under their control to build sophisticated smuggling equipment, such as a high tech submarine that was recently discovered by the Colombian National Police. Colombian cocaine traffickers had hired engineering experts from Russia and the United States to help with the design of the submarine, which apparently would have been used to secretly ship large quantities of cocaine to the United States. The astounding profits attracted an interesting mix of characters into the business. Jose Gonzalo Rodriguez Gacha had roots in Colombia's somewhat murky emerald trade. The Ochoa brothers were from a well respected ranching and horsing family. And the violent leader, Pablo Escobar, was a common street thief who masterminded the criminal enterprise that became known as the Medellin cartel. The cartel began to self-destruct as the violence and power grew. Rodriguez Gacha was eventually gunned down by the Colombian police. Jorge, Juan David and Fabio Ochoa turned themselves into the Colombian government in the early 1990s in exchange for lenient prison terms. And Pablo Escobar was hunted down and killed by the Colombian police after a long series of battles.

1. FBI SPECIAL TASK FORCE

The FBI SPECIAL TASK FORCE is the most elite group of people the world can offer.

Their task is to stop the cartels from smuggling drugs into America. They have a wide variety of weaponry and funding from the government. But due to laws they have a lot of restrictions that the cartel just does not have. These laws prevent FBI SPECIAL TASK FORCE opening fire before they are fired upon. They also need to talk and get permission from countries they want to operate in. in the scenario where they do not get permission they will get attacked by the local authorities. They should be well calculated and planned. FBI SPECIAL TASK FORCE should always try to stay ahead of . Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) of the United States which brought down many Colombian and Mexican narcotics syndicates like Pablo Escobar's, Cali Cartel, Sinaloa Cartel, Tijuana Cartel and others will discuss sharing intelligence as well as a joint mechanism to track and disrupt the money laundering associated with international drug smuggling networks with India's lead anti-drugs enforcement agency Narcotics Control Bureau (NCB) on Tuesday, people familiar with the development said.
